Highlight of the Week

Students began unit 4 this week with their substitute teacher (I will be back January 12th!!). Students analyzed the Election of 1800 and how ties are broken in presidential elections in the House. Students read a short biography of Aaron Burr and the events that unfolded after his shooting of Alexander Hamilton. Next week, we will be reviewing the information learned the first week back to make sure students understood the information they learned.

Language Arts with Mrs. Cerezo

Welcome back everyone!

I hope everyone enjoyed their Winter Break and found it restful and relaxing. We are now in 2021 and I am looking forward to what the rest of second trimester has to offer!

Each class is working on writing another compare and contrast essay-- this time using our class novel as the prompt. Their task was the compare and contrast two primary characters within the novel. We will soon be moving on to a new type of essay writing.

We are also spending some time listening to some music from our Humanities section of class-- music from The Cold War.

Students are also reading from their very own book club books. These books need to be completed by the first week in February; we will work on a project during that week that involves the students' personal books.

Scholastic Class: Ms. Losen will begin teaching Monday! I will be available and accessible to students at any time.

Tests weekly on Fridays! Be sure your student is studying their vocabulary words.

Language Arts with Ms. Greene and Ms. Polo

Hope everyone had a great Winter Break and are back refreshed. This week we started another compare and contrast essay based on the book for this Trimester, The Breadwinner. We are quickly reading through this book and will be completing it this coming week!

Reminders:

- Look on Google Classroom for due dates.
- No late assignments will be accepted

Friday Assignment: January 8th: Quiz

This week in art... (Ms. Losen)

Students put all of their pre-production work into practice as we began filming our movies! Students in person have received specific jobs such as acting on-camera, directing, cinematography, and more. Students at home have begun working on independent films as well and we are all working towards a student film festival at the end of the month.
